

UNIVERSITY TRANSFER PATHWAY PROGRAM

Green River College's University Transfer Pathway (UTP) program consists of conditional guaranteed admission and designated pathway agreements with the universities listed below. UC Irvine is ranked in the top 50 American universities. American, Arizona State, Baylor and Iowa rank in the top 100 in US or world rankings. Three others – Washington, Indiana and Purdue – are also highly ranked, but offer conditional guaranteed admission only at specific campuses.

Green River international students may choose a UTP university when first applying to Green River, and be issued admission letters from both Green River and the UTP university at the same time. Students may also choose a UTP university when applying for transfer, and be guaranteed or considered for preferred admission if the conditions are met. The main conditions are grade point average; other conditions include number of credits taken and English composition course grades. The UTP program may not apply to "impacted majors", or majors for which there are additional requirements other than just grade point average.

Students are not required to transfer to their UTP selection. They can transfer to any university they wish. It is good to know, however, that they can rely on their UTP selection as a designated pathway or guaranteed admission, so long as they fulfill the conditions. They can also apply to other UTP universities as well when they apply for admission. Several UTP universities require only a 2.0 grade point average for admission. As 2.0 is the minimum required grade point average for completion of Green River's Associate Degree, this means that all international students who complete an Associate Degree at Green River are guaranteed transfer admission to a university.
